

Toolkit for Rural Community Coordinated
Transportation Services
TCRP Report #101
February 9, 2006, 2-3:30 pm Eastern Time

NTI, in cooperation with TRB and APTA, is pleased to announce a series of innovative T-Classes that address current topics and trends which are related to a specific TCRP report.

The T-Class lasts 90 minutes and is delivered in a telephone conference format. It is much like a radio broadcast, in that the participants can listen in but cannot be heard. Expert panelists discuss the topics during the first 60 minutes of the teleconference; the last 30 minutes are dedicated to open phones for questions from the audience.

TCRP Report 101

Coordinated transportation services are evolving, as rural communities around the country strive to address more effectively the mobility and access needs of rural residents.

This discussion will examine strategies and practices used to coordinate rural transportation services and identifies model processes used for local coordination efforts in rural communities.

This presentation will identify ways to improve ongoing coordination efforts and present the critical factors that help determine success or failure in establishing sustainable rural public transportation services.

Discussion Topics Include:

- Basic Coordination Concepts
- Problems That Coordination Addresses
- Goals for Coordinated Transportation Services
- Coordination Details: Benefits, Costs and Barriers
- Implementing New Coordination Efforts

Who Should Participate?

This discussion will be of interest to practitioners and policy-makers in local communities, state agencies and tribal governments who plan and implement coordinated community transportation services in rural areas.

Fee: FREE, but you must register to participate.
